The Alan Turing Institute

The Turing Podcast

The Turing podcast is made for you if you love all things data science, AI and machine learning. The latest episode is all about careers in this exciting and fast moving area including opportunities at the government's listening station – GCHQ.

Content Creator

Content Creators produce and share content to connect a brand or entity with its audience. They may work in many industries, including media, retail, hospitality and brands and the role will involve writing, designing and editing content that a business creates as part of a content development plan. Excellent communication skills are required especially the ability to listen to and understand the target market and adapt the message to suit them. Content creators also need to be creative thinkers with good analytical skills.
